

2015 Symposium on Progress in Wind Engineering and Structural Dynamics

Tamsui Campus, Tamkang University, TAIWAN, November 1-2, 2015

The Symposium on Progress in Wind Engineering and Structural Dynamics will be held on November 2, 2015 at Tamkang University (TKU) in New Taipei City, Taiwan. This mini-symposium is aimed at bringing together the specialists, researchers and practitioners in wind engineering and structural dynamics, to review recent achievements in the advancement of knowledge and understanding in these areas, to share the latest developments in research, and to address the challenges faced by related engineering projects. For this specialized symposium, we have invited many speakers from Asian and European countries to present their recent research achievements. The participants come from 4 countries and regions, including China, Czech, Japan, and Taiwan. The symposium program will include keynote lectures and invited papers in specialized areas of wind engineering and structural dynamics. We expect more than 50 participants to attend this symposium and the accompanying scientific events.
